

Press Release

Back To School Again

Craftsman Construction gets EarthCraft House Certified

October 22, 2008

Craftsman Construction has just completed an intense training course for the EarthCraft House of Virginia green building program. EarthCraft House is a green building program that serves as a blueprint for healthier, more comfortable homes, which reduce utility bills and protect the environment. Homeowners benefit from conservation of resources and energy, improved air and water quality and savings on operating and repair cost.

“The primary benefit of taking these certification courses is to better benefit the homeowner who is relying on your knowledge to guide them thru the building process” said Jerry Jackness owner of Craftsman Construction.

The Leader in Green Building

EarthCraft House is an award winning program offered by leading builders in the Southeast. The program standards were developed through a unique partnership with the housing industry, the environmental community and government leaders. Each new EarthCraft House is required to pass an independent 3rd party inspection. The inspection is based on a flexible point system that requires a minimum of 150 points to be certified. For more information go to www.earthcraftvirginia.org

